Speech Pathology

What do speech pathologists do?

Adult speech pathologists work with people facing challenges in communication, cognition, or swallowing.

Communication involves a spectrum of skills including speaking, listening, hearing, understanding, reading, writing, thinking, using your voice and social skills. Our service aims to help people feel more confident and connected to their community.

How can a speech pathologist help?

Our speech pathologists will collaborate with you, your family, and your healthcare team to evaluate your specific needs, create a personalised treatment plan, and help you reach your health goals.

Our speech pathology services may include assessments, individual or group therapy, counselling and provision of education to clients and their family.

Speech pathologists can assist you to:

- communicate with others
- understand people
- remember what people say
- find the words to say
- eat and drinking safely
